

Commercial real estate booming where marijuana sales are legalized

Legalized marijuana is turning the commercial real estate market upside down, and creating opportunities for property owners to charge tenants in the business of marijuana premium rates. Some are paying above market rates for properties that meet the demands of this growing industry.

The New York times highlights property in Quincy, MA in this article.

Date Created

April 1, 2017