

TSA prohibition of medical marijuana in carry-on and checked baggage forces users to make difficult choices

The Marijuana Industry touches on so many people, and just as many industries. Earlier this month, the Transportation Security Administration updated its webpage to explain that passengers are allowed to carry marijuana on flights with them. That notice was not long lived, however as shortly after it was posted, it was modified to remove reference to medical marijuana.

Leafly has the complete story here.

Date Created

April 5, 2017